Prospectus

Vocational Guidance implies specialised advice on the choice of vocations and selection of careers. It involves the determining of an individual's natural aptitude for future studies and the vocations or careers best suited to one's talents and temperaments and in which he or she is likely to find maximum success and satisfaction. Such a procedure, besides obviating aimless drifting and avoiding 'square pegs in round holes' (otherwise called 'misfits'), has been found to save much time, energy and money that would otherwise be wasted not only by the individuals concerned, but also by those responsible for them. Vocational Guidance has thus become a social necessity.

The authors of the Sargeant Committee Report have therefore rightly attached great importance to Educational and Vocational Guidance on scientific lines in their scheme for National System of Education for India.

Individual and group tests based on the best psychological principles are administered with a view to arriving at the final result bearing on assignment of future studies and careers. In this connection it may be pointed out that only the standard and reliable tests are used by the Institute throughout with only such modifications as have been found absolutely necessary. Ours is perhaps the first and the only Institute of its kind in India.

(1) General Intelligence: The measurement and assessment of one's general intelligence is a necessary pre-requisite for the purpose aforesaid. The term 'intelligence' has been defined variously as 'commonsense', 'ability to learn', 'general alertness', 'ability to profit by experience', 'readiness of comprehension', 'thought power', etc. Whatever the definition be, to the vocational adviser the degree or amount of intelligence possessed by an individual should be, as nearly as possible, the same as that demanded by the occupation the individual aspires or applies for. It is, therefore, extremely desirable for every individual to have some estimate of the degree of general intelligence (i.e. whether very high, high, average, or below average, as the case may be) possessed by him or her in

FOREWORD

THE JOB SCRAPBOOK is a collection of information on a widely diversified group of careers. It includes material that has appeared in Glamour or that has been sent to our readers directly over a period of two and a half years. All facts have been checked and revised to bring the Scrapbook up-to-date.

To give you some idea of the accuracy and comprehensive coverage in the Scrapbook, consider how this material has been prepared. The Job Department of Glamour contacts as many as a hundred authoritative sources of information in describing any one job field. These sources include trade and professional associations, outstanding personalities in the field, personnel directors, the government, schools and colleges. If regional variations within a job field call for further research, we conduct surveys to define the difference in trends throughout the country. In some cases where it has seemed best to have a more personal approach on a subject, we have commissioned authorities on the subject to write our articles.

The Job Scrapbook is organized for your convenience. It includes a table of contents covering the twenty-five pockets devoted to specific career categories, and an index covering several hundred individual jobs.

Material in the Scrapbook includes reprints of Job feature articles, Job Ideas, Job correspondence that has appeared in the magazine, and our Fact Sheets. The material is in loose form and fits into the pocket pages. It can be removed for bulletin board or Job display purposes, for easier handling in student conferences, and for use by a greater number of individuals at one time. Additional material can be added to the pocket. This flexibility in form is important as any file of job material is constantly changing and expanding. We plan to issue supplementary material ourselves from time to time.

We should like to call your attention to the fact that though certain of the personalities described in the articles have changed positions since the story about them appeared, they are all representative of the progress women have made in the job fields described.

Glamour's Job Scrapbook has been compiled for your use, to help your students make confident plans for the future based upon a sound introduction to the facts concerning the careers which interest them. You will find that the last pocket in the book is devoted to descriptions of Glamour's Job Department services. If you have further specific questions on any job subject, or if we can be of help to you in any way regarding your vocational program, please write to us or visit Glamour's Job Reference Room.

We are very pleased to have our Job Scrapbook in your vocational library and invite you to call on Glamour's Job Department at any time.
